They returned Friday night and report a pleasant and profitable visit. A banquet was tendered them after the regular ceremonies of the evening, which was artistically prepared and highly enjoyed nutil a late hour. Commander Smith was presented by W. A. Eaton, Assistant Adjutant-General of the Department, at the request of Mrs. R. P. Wheeler, widow of the late Post Department Commander, with the sword, belt and sash of that comrade which was presented to him on the occasion of his clevation to the office of Department Commander by a comrade who was carried badly wounded from the field of Antictam to a safe place on the back of Commander Wheeler. The presentation speech and reply of Commander Smith was worthy of the occasion. This sword and equipments will remain the property of the department.

John Dick Holloway, a white man, was found last night by a policeman at the corner of Third and Baker streets with his skull fractured. The wound had the appearance of being caused by a blow, but he could not be induced to tell who did it. He was not hurt at that point, as the blood was traced to the Third-street gate of the cemetery, and from there over to Second street, and then north for some distance.

He was taken to the almshouse, and at an early hour this morning he was in a stupor, and pronounced quite an ill man.

The cooking school under the care of Mrs. Cringan, which met with such success in Richmond last winter, will be reopened tomorrow at Mrs. Cringan's residence, 319 east Franklin street, at 11 A. M. In October e east Franklin street, at 11 A. M. In October last she went to Baltimore, and under the auspices of the Woman's Industrial Association there started a short term of the cooking school. It became a signal success, the ladies being so anxious to get the full benefit of her admirable teachings that took three lessons a week instead of one a week, as is the case here. Mrs. Cringan is u ged to reopen her school in Baltimore in the spring, after completing her course of teaching here.

Last week we took a breathing spell to look over the ruin and wreck wrought by the hol days to gather up the frag ments, to round out as far as possible departments decimated by "Xmas shop pers—in a word, we stood still after the effect of a fine painting as to attempt a description of the innumerable styles and fancies embodied is our fancy fabrics. As is invariably the case, the word were heading. Our sales show a gain of nearly 50 per cent, over last year, but OUR STOCK IS DOUBLE WHAT IT OUGHT TO BE. Yes more than double. It is to unload and put ourselves in shape for early spring The no-credit feature introduced by Levy & Davis on Friday to continue during their Final Closing Sale created such excitement in the trade that they issued the following exchanatory of it: "Having closed our books on December 31, 1890, to prepare for the opening of our new Broad-street store on February 2, 1891, we positively will not charge any goods for the few weeks we remain here. We regret to be compelled to do this, and to make some return for the possible inconvenience it may cause some do this, and to make some return for the possible inconvenience it may cause some of our old customers we have reduced our entire stock to cost and below cost, thus making an inducement to purchase for cash. During our closing-out sale no goods can be sent on approbation or exchanged. Everything will be sold for cash. We trust our old friends and patrons will see the advantage to them by this policy, and when we open our Broad-street store Monday. February 2d, we shall be ready to extend every accommedation of the past, and we hope to merit the patronage of all." nut ourselves in shape for early spring that we inaugurate to-morrow a "Cli max Clearages, which simply means that ALMOST ANY PRICE WILL BUY ANYTHING IN OUR STORE.
